11. Catalog/Course description:

   Introduction to Digital Storytelling is designed for students with no previous experience in multimedia production. The course includes discussions of multimedia examples of storytelling combined with hands-on experience in producing original content using photography, audio, video, and animation. By highlighting the legal, moral, and ethical issues involved in multimedia production, students will also improve their media literacy skills. Students will learn about Indigenous approaches to storytelling and are encouraged to utilize their own perspective in the digital production of their stories.
