Introduction to Digital Storytelling is designed for students with no previous experience in multimedia production. The course includes discussions of multimedia examples of storytelling combined with hands-on experience in producing original content using photography, audio, video, and animation. By highlighting the legal, moral, and ethical issues involved in multimedia production, students will also improve their media literacy skills. Students will learn about Indigenous approaches to storytelling and are encouraged to utilize their own perspective in the digital production of their stories.
14. Course Content (Provide an outline of major topics covered in course)

- Basic photography, audio, video, and animation production skills.
- Four interconnected styles - journalism, public relations, marketing, and art.
- Legal, moral, and ethical aspects involved in each of these four styles. Consent forms, copyright, and digital distribution.
- Media literacy
- Practical skills in effective multimedia production.
- Indigenous issues covered by media.
- Media bias especially towards minorities and women.

15. Learning Goals, Outcomes, and Assessment
